COMMENTARY

Market Review

- All Asia ex Japan markets except Indonesia started 2010 with single digit monthly decline in January, as China and India both raised reserve requirements for banks to curb lending growth and dampen inflation.
- After the strong equity returns of 2009, markets saw some profit taking on concerns of potential tightening by central banks.

Outlook

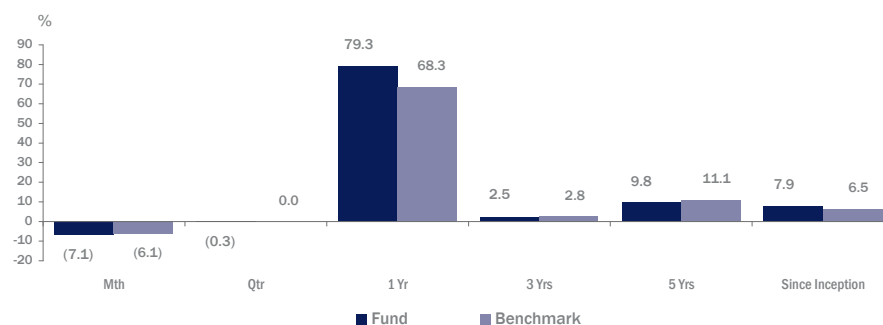

- We believe Asia is still in a secular bull market, but a short term correction is inevitable given the powerful rally in 2009. That said, valuations for Asian markets are near normalized levels, so investment opportunities still exist.
- We expect 2010 to be about stock selection and balancing risk/return as investors shift away from economic recovery to economic sustainability.

Fund Activity

- Notable Fund performance in January came from Li and Fung Ltd., Aboitiz Power, and United Tractors.
- During the month, we decreased the Fund's weighting in China and Singapore. We also established an exposure to Digital China Holdings Ltd. The company's earnings will likely be driven by China's rebound in IT spending and the extension of the rural subsidy program.
