COMMENTARY

Market Review

- The EMBI+ widened back out in the second half of January after opening firmly and finished the month 33 bps wider at +307 over US Treasuries.
- EM corporate bonds continued to recover, while the USD recovery unsettled EM currencies, though EM FX strengthened against the weaker euro.

Fund Activity

- The Fund gave back most of its early gains to perform more or less in line with the index over the month as a whole.
- Venezuela and corporate holdings contributed positively to performance, while an overweight position in Argentina, and underweights in Mexico and Russia, contributed negatively.

Outlook

- EM credit remains attractive in spite of the pullback in the second half of January. Fundamentals are generally positive in our markets compared to the developed world, and strong and liquid enough to provide funding for those governments wishing to pre-fund for this year.
- EM may experience some increased volatility in the short term as investors appear to struggle for direction. However, the Fund is comfortable using a buy-on-dips strategy for the year as high beta names such as Argentina and Venezuela have yet to recover fully to pre-crisis levels. In addition, local currency and corporate debt are expected to offer sufficiently attractive yield differentials to compensate for a minor increase in volatility.
